SUMMARY

In the case of special microbiological practices (e.g. use of syringes; procedures that have a high potential for generating aerosols; use of instrumentation such as pH meters, spectrophotometer, plate reader), additional training is required. Hence training was arranged in Pune District Education association's department of microbiology for all teaching and non teaching staff for following safety instructions. Persons that are Immuno compromised must inform the laboratory supervisor prior to working in the laboratory. Under some circumstances, a personal physician may need to be informed of the organisms and procedures occurring in the laboratory in order to assess the risk to the worker. Gloves must be worn to protect hands from exposure to hazardous materials. Gloves should be changed when contaminated or glove integrity is compromised. Gloves should be removed using proper technique to avoid contamination of the user.
